

CTRx: Navigating the Options

The CTRx model has become increasingly popular in clinical trials by combining prescription card services, global pharmacy dispensing, and centralized local drug supply in a single solution. These key factors allow your clinical trial to be fulfilled reliably, timely and cost-effectively. Here's what you need to consider when comparing CTRx models.

3 Warning Signs You'll Want to Avoid:

1 Lack of Solutions for White-bagging Policies:
Some clinical sites have processes in place that prevent patient specific medication being sent by a central pharmacy to the IDS. This is where Myonex's other services can come into your overall drug sourcing strategy—we can tailor our solutions to each individual site as needed, keeping them happy!

2 No Global Solution:
Companies need to provide personalized and local drug access globally, not just in one region to support clinical trials. Myonex's CTRx solution is global and not limited in it's comprehensive solution.

3 No Pharmacist-Led Services:
A team of pharmacists not only understands the prescription process and the impact to patients, they also have clinical site experience and can speak to the IDS Pharmacists as peers and fully understand their processes. Myonex's CTRx is pharmacist led.
